SAN MARCOS, July 2, 1881:

MY DEAR M.: "I wish I could take off my flesh and "I wish I could take on my nees and sit down in my bones, with the marrow knocked out for the draught to blow through," said the droll, mimitable Sidney Smith on a certain warm day a long time ago, and the sentiment has been echoed, on ce.asion, ever since. That day, or rather its rival, came to us received. That day, or rather its rival, came to us yesterday. Every sufferer left inspired to utterance, and every tongue moved to speech—while more energy was expended in abusing the weather than would be required to build a bridge across the Mississippi. All the heat of all the summers past and to come seemed to gather and concentrate into one dull, breathless mass of oppossion, and sale gather and concentrate into one duit, breathless mass of oppression, and sottle down, down, upon us, until we could almost touch it, it came so near. For the time being we seemed to be suspend ad in a suitry, stagnant world, whose motionless walls closed over us and around us without a single break along their heated surface.

But at midnight—that dim, myste is the first wedding in Kyle. Wonder who will be next?

The trustees have elected a teacher for the school at this place, Rev. T. H. Storts from Mo.; he will move here soon and he is ready to take charge as soon as the house is built. Mr. Tom-

Among the San Marcosans we met at New Braunfels were M. Von Randau and lady, who seemed to be enjoying the cocasion greatly.

We met Miss Ella Deaton last week for the first time since her return, and find her developed into a fair, bleoming and lovely young lady.

Educational.

An old teacher has handed us a letter recently received from Mr. Rainey, of the State Board of Education, from which we make the following extracts:

DIED.

At his residence in San Marcos, June 28 At his residence in son Marcos, while 2s, 1881, at ten minutes past 4 o'clock in the evening, Captain H. B. Corrieno, aged forty-two years. The funeral was attended June 30 at 9 a. M. from the Methodist church. The subject of this memoir came to this city in 1866, engaged in the practice of law, and was an able member of the bar until the time of his death. About one year since owing to declining health, he was obliged fession, and gradually sank under the influ ence of his disease, ulcer of the stomach which occasioned him much suffering Sometime before his death he became per fectly resigned, and was visited and prayed for by Rev. Mr. Fisher. Agreeably to the wishes of the deceased, his attending physician being willing, the deceased after mak ing a profession of religion was baptized by immendon. He seemed to die at peace an in charity with all mankind. He was visited by numerous friends during his illness, who with members of the bar and his circle of equaintances, deeply regret his loss.

The deceased leaves a wife and two youn daughters. In accordance with the wishes of the deceased husband, and fearing if would be prejudicial to his wife's health during the hot summer months, the family do not appear in mourning.
